Armaan practices commercial litigation and employment law. He is a dedicated and detail-oriented advocate, focused on finding practical solutions tailored to each client's unique circumstance. Armaan has represented clients before administrative tribunals and the BC Supreme Court.

Armaan advises clients on contractual disputes, shareholder disputes and business torts, as well as wrongful dismissal claims and employment standards. He also provides advice on employment and commercial contracts.

Armaan began working at Harris as an articling student and became an associate in 2021. Before joining Harris, he worked as an intern in the legal department of a national financial institution, at a nationally recognized non-profit law firm and as a farmhand.

While attending law school, Armaan participated in the Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot, volunteered with the Law Students Legal Advice Program and Pro Bono Students Canada, and was a legal research assistant on his exchange semester at the National University of Singapore.
